Description

This memorandum template, or memo for short, features a clean minimalist layout to enable efficiently communicating internal company news, announcements, notices or other information. Key information about the memo is in a larger font, such as the title, date, to/from and subject. The ample whitespace clearly delimits each section and gives the document lots of breathing room. Three columns of additional information are present in the

Compilation

This template compiles with standard pdf_latex. There are no special requirements outside of packages that are supplied with a full distribution of TeX.

Memo Information Commands

Several custom commands are present in a MEMO INFORMATION block in the template and are used for specifying all memo information except for the main memo body.

`\memotitle` This command takes a single parameter for the main document title at the top. While the default is Memorandum, you may prefer the informal Memo, Announcement or Notice instead. The text you enter will be automatically capitalized.

`\memodate` This command takes a single parameter for the memo date which appears at the top under the main title. Leave this command empty (i.e.

`\memoinfotablerow`

commands on

separate lines in its single parameter.

Each `\memoinfotablerow` takes 2 parameters, the first for the information title (e.g. To:, From: or Subject:) and the second for the information content (e.g. All Middle Managers). Either parameter can be empty if you would like to leave a gap, which can be useful when one title should have more than one line of information.

`\leftcontactinfo` ,`\centercontactinfo` and`\rightcontactinfo` These commands take a single parameter each and are used to output the small columns of text in the footer of each page of the memo. Each line should be separated with the standard newline character `\\` and will wrap automatically if the content is too long. You may leave any or all of these commands empty if this information is not required in the footer, e.g.

`\centercontactinfo{}` .
